No tax waiver for clinic

Representatives of the Elk Point Municipal Hospital Board met with Elk Point Town Council Monday night to review their request to waive taxes on the former nurses' residence, which has been renovated for use as a clinic.

The Town was not swayed from its position that the clinic is a business operation and therefore the status of the property has changed from non-taxable to taxable. Council later voted to deny the Board's request.

In another matter relating to taxes, council was told that Park Lane Investments has been taxed for two mobile homes located on rental lots, rather than on the lots only. The Town will reimburse the $726.03 paid on the mobile homes.

Park Lane Investments will also be advised that they do not have to construct sidewalks on the pedestrian walkways at this time as the walkways were not part of the original development agreement.

Council approved payment of local improvement costs on the mobile home subdivision in the amount of $53,395, following review of the invoiced amount. They subsequently approved a debenture borrowing draw in that amount, to be repaid at 11 5/8% over 20 years.

Councillor Marshall Kachmar reported that a group of residents in the Ravine Drive and Circle Drive areas have decided to reconstruct the small bridge crossing the ravine between the two areas at no cost to the Town. Kachmar is overseeing the project, which includes the 16 foot long bridge and cleanup of the surrounding area.

Mural in progress

Information Night enjoys good crowd participation

Almost forty clubs, organizations and agencies took part in the Third Annual Elk Point Information Night last Wednesday, with a good crowd visiting the booths and displays.

A number of groups used the event as their registration night for the coming season's activities, which ranged from Guiding and Scouting to gymnastics and Oilettes.

Albums and history books outlining the success as of previous years were displayed by many clubs including the Ukrainian Dance Club, Lions and Royal Purple, while other groups such as the Army Cadets and the Elks Lodge used video presentations to make the public aware of their programs.

Elk Point Scouting Association marked sixty years in Elk Point with their display, which included photographs, posters, books and brochures regarding Beavers, Cubs and Scouts. Another busy year in the offing, the Association's display was surrounded by parents eager to register their youngsters for the coming year, as was the Guiding table two rows over.

The newly revived and revised Recreation and Cultural Board display was manned by Council representative Marshall Kachmar and Board member Bruce Kleberger, who explained plans for future development of the recreation land, as well as answering many questions, on various aspects of Elk Point's recreational scene.

Collections of local recipes and tickets to the upcoming Ladies Night Out, November 14, vied for attention at the Elk Point Lioness table, where applications for Block Parents were also being taken.

Elk Point Chamber offered memberships and information on the area, and outlined the Chamber fields of endeavor.

The St. Paul Aquatic Centre had a very busy evening at their display, as many welcomed the opportunity to sign up themselves or their youngsters for swimming lessons.

SIXTY YEARS OF SCOUTING — Are highlighted in the Information Night display of the Elk Point Scouting Association.

Information Night

The Alberta Career Centre, the St. Paul Crises Centre, AADAC, Agriculture's District Home Economist Becky Lore offered a wide range of pamphlets outlining their operations and programs, for the information and assistance of district residents.

The Canadian Save The Children Fund, represented by Edythe Way, and UNICEF, represented by Kay

Klopstock, offered the opportunity to donate to these worthwhile charities at their eye-catching displays. Handicrafts which are sold to provide funding or sent directly to the needy were the highlight of the Red Cross display, manned by several devoted and hardworking local fundraisers.

Information on the many varied projects available through the local 4-H Clubs made another attractive corner, with some very carefully done projects and project books on display.

The Elk Point United Church's "assistant minister" and Rev. Sam Donaldson invited all to visit the church and become part of its many programs for youth and adults alike. The Baptist Church also was represented.

Lakeland College and LEARN offered information on upcoming courses and programs for many interest groups.

The many goodies and crafts available at each Saturday's Farmers Market were temptingly advertised at their display.

The Elk Point Historical Society had two panels of their mural-in-progress on hand for viewing, along with a display of the paints, brushes and varnish being used, and details of the Society's proposals to restore the fur trading fort sites.

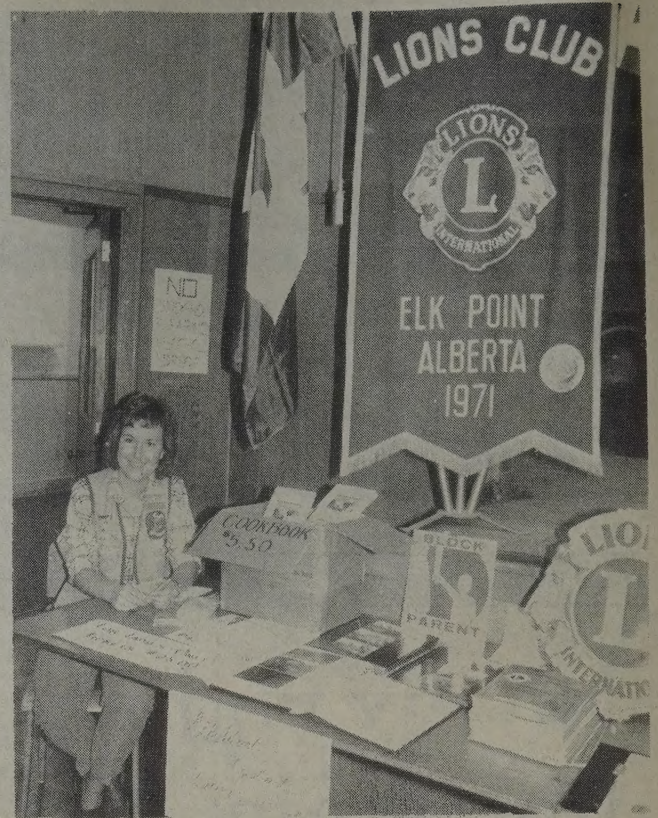

Elk Point Public Library invited all to attend their October 3 Book Sale, and urged library members in attendance to enter their names in a book draw. Next door, the Northeast Library Project display explained its concepts with a series of photos.

The Elk Point RCMP offered booklets and advice on crime prevention and consumer awareness, with the Detachment's officers on hand to answer questions.

Elk Point Further Education had a sizeable display of items completed in last year's classes, to whet the enthusiasm of students for the many courses about to begin.

The Elk Point FCSS Department, co-sponsors of Information Night, along with the Lioness Club and Further Ed, also had a display regarding their many programs.

Refreshments for the evening were prepared by Prime Cut Caterers, and were enjoyed by all.

LIONESS DISPLAY WELL ATTENDED — Verona Lee Flanders presides at one of the busiest displays at Information Night. The Lioness Cookbook and tickets to Ladies' Night Out proved very popular.

North park update

By Laura MacKay
Secretary North End Park

This is an update of activity and donations toward our park.

First I would like to thank Robin Nielson of Shamrock Valley Enterprises for donating the post hole auger used on our day of construction Sept. 5. In error I thanked East End Rentals for this donation, my apologies for the misunderstanding.

As you will notice upon visiting our park there has been more tire equipment installed as well as brightly painted garbage barrels, thanks to Ron Croteau, Sally Vincent and Susan Lett who are in charge of our painting. Good job, ladies. As well, we are now preparing the bordered areas & hill for sodding. Thank you to Jake Orr of JorAnn Enterprises for your donation, as well as to Lynall Slywka of the Empress and Russ Hebblethwaite for offering the use of equipment which will help us greatly in our landscaping.

We are asking that the ladies in our neighborhood come out on Oct. 4 at 9:00 a.m. and give us a hand in laying sod. It's not a hard job and the more people make's less work for everyone.

At this time I would like to mention and thank these people and businesses who have donated cash towards our much needed toddler equipment.

Oilpatch Laundry Mat, E-Can Oilfield Service, Toronto Dominion Bank, Elk Point Esso, Work Warehouse, Red Rooster, Denny's Auto Body, Rhondaray Confectionery, Millie's Flowers, Lloyd's Towing, Leeway Heavy Oil, Andrew Boddy, Grand Mar, Tarsands Steam Cleaning, Double S Confectionery, Len's Mobile Steam Service, Dr. Bruce Kleeberger and an anonymous $50 donation.

As well I would like to thank these Park Committee members who are not always mentioned, but are often appreciated: Barb & Ron Croteau, Susan & Bob Lett, Jackie & Anthony Peters, Sherry Oszest, Sylkie Hancock, Gail & Larry Kozicky, Susan Mackinnon, Sally Vincent, Laura MacKay.

Thanks goes to the Lakeland Review for their coverage of our park, and for letting the people know where the donations of time and money are going.

Mural visitors learn town's history

The Elk Point Historic Mural, now nearing the half-way point, is drawing many visitors from far and near. Last week, a trip of Special Education students from Elk Point Elementary School spent a fascinating hour at the studio, as mural artist Billie Lynne Milholland explained the early history of the area which the mural depicts, and later allowed the youngsters to take brushes in hand and try their artistic talents on the ferryboat which borders the fourth and fifth panels. Other school groups are eager to visit the mural studio, Ms. Milholland says. She feels that this is an excellent way for young people to learn about the early days of the Elk Point district.

Other visitors have come from both east and west coasts of Canada and the USA, plus many points in between. The guest book started in the first days of the project is almost filled, with more signatures added daily. Many include enthusiastic comments.

Two recent visitors were Jim Ross of Edmonton, son of Dr. A. G. Ross, and Dr. K. C. Miller of Marwayne, son of Dr. F. G. Miller who came to view their fathers' portraits on the mural's 9th panel.

Really that bad

Despite assurances to the contrary by various lending institutions, things are far from rosy on the rural scene.

Grain prices have dropped to a fraction of those a few years ago, while input costs remain the same. Cattle prices are good at the present, but many farmers have already had to sell off their herds to pay bills. Machinery and buildings are falling into disrepair because there is no available cash to do any but essential maintenance.

Are all these people poor managers? Certainly not.

But now, people are still making payments on those high interest mortgages, with the proceeds from 60¢ oats which may well have cost 70¢ a bushel to grow, or more.

If only we hadn't sold the cattle, they say. It paid the most urgent bills, but now a valuable income source is gone—how valuable, we didn't know at that time. Remember the days when no one believed that steer calves would hit the dollar mark? Many sold cows for $400 which would now bring double that amount.

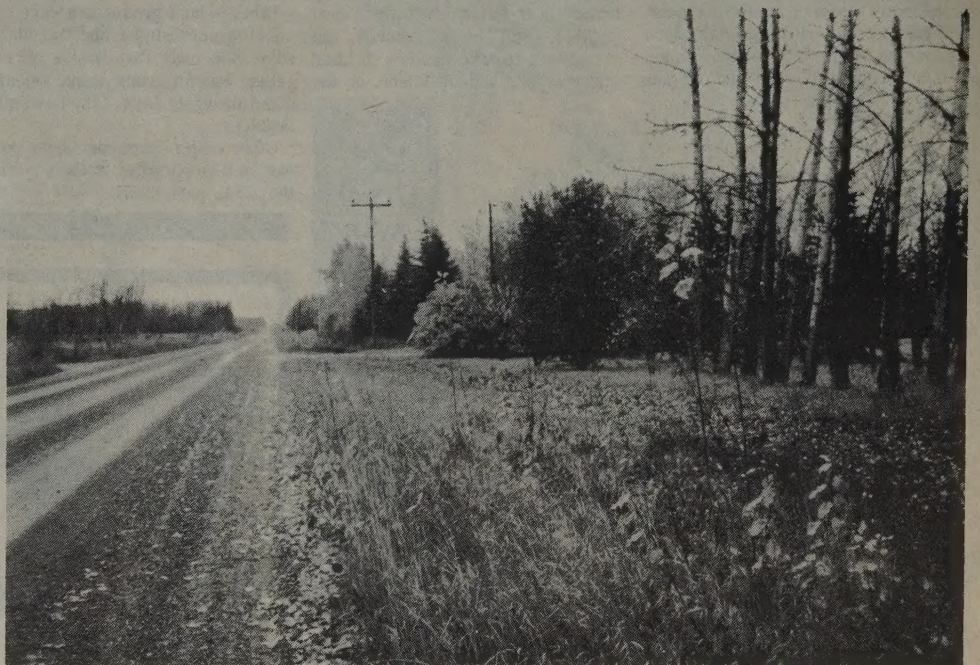

Where will it all end? No one knows.

Many became over-optimistic in the days of high product prices and expanded their operations, and then found the high interest rates more than they could handle. Who would have believed that interest could become the largest single cost on a farm expense sheet?

New homes, more land, purebred cattle herds and new combines made sense in the days of $8 canola. Paying for these additions at interest upwards of 20% made cents too—for the lenders. However, payments could be made, while the grain prices stayed high.

But, for sure, most farmers will be hanging in there til the bitter end. As long as there is land to seed, seed to plant, and a little diesel to run the tractor, the crops will go in. As long as there are a few old cows, and a few acres of pasture, there will be calves to sell in the fall.

It may not be the "good life", but it's their life, and they feel it's worth hanging onto, as long as they possibly can.

Alberta Trails

First day of fall

By Irene Magnusson

Of course the first day of autumn has to also see the last day of summer gone down the drain. How very short they are making the summers now-a-days! Here we are, just getting the lawn mower sharpened, ready for summer - and it's gone already!

These past few weeks have found me very busy, with a busyness which kept me mostly indoors. NOT my idea of how to spend the fall. Then, suddenly, one evening I am coming home from my tasks, and I find the entire driveway is lined with gold, overhung with leaves no longer green, just hanging there flirting with the wind, maddeningly ready to fly off the boughs, flutter to earth, to be gone - gone - gone!

Where has my summer gone? Where, indeed, has the autumn gone? Already, on this brilliant September day, the air is filled with movement, leaves are falling, far overhead birds are flocked and fleeing, and the breeze tugs and tugs. If only we could pull a bit of that glorious blue sky down here, wouldn't it make the most satisfying sheets, table covers, shirts?

Over in the garden, where frost has long since lowered the beans and potato tops to shrunken brown unrecognizable shreds, where seed pods burst on the poppies, midst the few remaining of scarlet and purple, a few calandulas bravely orange, a few bright sweetpeas float on clinging stems - and all beyond is the stand of gold, the poplars ready to undress for another year.

In the dry grasses, tall along the fence, are some red, red wild rose leaves, giving yet again a splash of color, all Alberta's own. How dark the distant spruce appear, among the yellow-dressed, or naked trees - for the balsams have flamed and blown days ago, and now are ready for winter, stripped and bare.

Sometimes I feel there should be a law, that says no one should work, or stay indoors when we have days like these. I regret every minute I am not out there, absorbing the beauty, smelling the spices of autumn, watching each leaf fall, feeling every sunbeam warm on my body. My ears should only hear the rustle underfoot, the faint and far away honking as geese pass by, the whisper of the wind in the dry treetops.

Why am I not beside a lake, with blue above and blue below, and the ripples washing the sand? Why not spinning over the glossy-smooth water, all the gold reflected and reflected in the endless expanse, marked only by a trailing wake? Why am I not watching the gulls rise and wheel, white as saints, or the clusters of ducks, bobbing together, planning their route to the waterways of their winter homes? And the yellow leaves, dancing on the ripples, washing the shore ...

So today, I will strip my garden, pile the rubbish and blacken the earth with my angry machine. I will fill the barrel with rubbish and let the smoke trail rise up through the yellow leaves, lazy and white. A few things I will leave for another day, the carrots keep well in the soil, and I will never pull down those sweetpea vines while there is still a flower left.

Asters and petunias are not too easily cowed by a light frost, I've found, and respond well to a good soaking, even this late in the year. And have you tried those little blue flowers, they are called baby-blue-eyes - and so they are - small and fragile, yet profuse, and so tough they will bloom until the ice forms, sometimes knocked flat overnight, yet rising up and sending out more blue-eyes when the sun comes up. They are also kind enough to reseed themselves, and come up year after year, wherever I leave them come, among the petunias, or asters, or in the onion patch - they don't care.

Some plants, while not native to our land, are just made for Alberta, tough and resilient. (Some of them are weeds, too).

This was not a year for toadstools and mushrooms, at least I didn't find many, so assume it was too dry. For all the early frost, I had the best crop of raspberries I had in years, and some are still ripening on the dry bushes, with the bluejays quick to nip them off. Underneath, the new growth is lush and green, building for next year.

Enough of this typing, enough of being indoors. I will rise up, put on my boots and go, out into the golden fall, the whispering breeze, the azure sky. Perhaps the road will tempt me enough, and my wheels will find me a patch of water, with a splashing shore and a flock of gulls. And I hope I see you there.

Mural watch

By Billie Lynne Milholland

The Mural Studio welcomed a record number of visitors this weekend, about two thirds of them being people from out of town. The response continues to be enthusiastic and encouraging.

Buster Valentine from Duncan, B.C., whose father ran the Hopkins Trading Co. and built Johnson Bros. grocers, told me a delightful story that could be about the three boys sitting in the grass on the second Panel.

Buster Valentine, Lyle Valentine and Roy Demyer were buddies. They roamed around together in the old town that sprawled down the east end of 50 Ave. They poked around Caskeys livery barn, hung out behind Caskeys hotel, hoping for free ice cream, fresh out of the old 5 gal ice cream freezer, and they sat outside Johnson Bros. Grocers on the days that the movie man came to town.

Before the dance hall was built, the movie man showed his Charlie Chaplin silent movies in the grocery store. The boys, of course, didn't have the nickel required to watch the movie, so they bided their time until the movie had started, then slipped in through a side window and crouched in the back, drinking in every erratic move of the little man in the black suit.

The mural had a visit from some students from the elementary school. We used the occasion for an impromptu history art lesson.

You may have noticed the tall pipe towering over the creek by the library. Yes, those are the very one that will carry the 25 panels some time in the spring.

I am looking for pictures of early businessmen at work and/or something with the business letterhead on...eg. calendar, matches, receipt book etc.

New business expands to meet needs

An established business which moved to the Elk Point area recently has already found it necessary to expand to meet the needs of one of the major oil companies operating in the Lindbergh oilfield.

NL Bobyk Custom Grading, formerly of Duverney, has been employed by Westmin Resources for the past two years, grading, building and snowplowing well lease roads. Nick and Lorraine Bobyk and sons decided to move their base of operations to the heart of the Lindbergh field earlier this summer, and just this past week, expanded their operation with the purchase of a brand new 140G Caterpillar grader from R. Angus Alberta Limited. The Bobyks also added experienced grader operator Joe Whillans to their staff. Whillans his wife and 2 sons have just moved to Elk Point from Calgary.

Nick Bobyk said he was "quite excited; about the expansion of his business, which was done in answer to a request by Westmin's Gordon McCuaig. Westmin also has graders run by JorAnn Enterprises and Cliff's Trucking at work on their roads, which link 350 producing wells. When a heavy snowfall occurs, McCuaig noted "that's a lot of miles of road," and road which needs clearing in the shortest possible time.

Bobyk's motto is, "quality people and quality equipment make for quality work."

He takes great pride in this quality workmanship and this has produced satisfied customers. Gordon McCuaig told us "If you want the finer work done, he's the man to do it."

A hearty welcome to; the new business and the new families.

Lionesses plan Ladies Night

The third annual Ladies Night Out was the main topic of discussion when the Elk Point & District Lioness Club resumed their monthly meetings for the 1987/88 season.

The date for Ladies Night Out has been set - November 14 - and the major door prizes finalized - a trip to Las Vegas and a Mayfield Inn weekend package. Ticket sales are being handled by Lioness Lee Johnson (724-4450) and Lioness Connie Stone (724-3506). It is anticipated that the sale of tickets will be as brisk as they were in the past two years for this special night for the ladies of Elk Point and area.

The second major fund raising project for the year is the sale of community cookbooks which were compiled and published by the club. Lioness Donna Bassett reported that the cookbook has been well received and sales have been very steady.

All funds raised through these two projects will go towards community projects. Financial support was given this month to the Jaws of Life campaign, parent nursery, playschool playground project, the St. Paul and District Crisis Centre and the F.G. Miller High School Awards Night. The Lioness Club felt that all of these are worthwhile community oriented projects and were pleased to be able to show support in this manner.

The Lioness club is wrapping up their Markstad Park project with the installation of a slide and sod for a hillside. This has been a long-term project for the club and the results have been gratifying.

Hazardous waste. Removing it from view does not remove it from our world.

Every year, Alberta generates some 90 000 tonnes of hazardous wastes. These are the "special" wastes produced by industry, agriculture, hospitals, laboratories and households which cannot be disposed of by conventional means. Unless specially managed and treated, they pose a potential threat to our land, our water, the very air we breathe.

Until now, these wastes have proved a complex problem. Some have been treated by the generating industries on their own sites. Others have been stored or exported. Still others have been improperly dumped.

Now, Alberta has a better way. A province-wide system for safe analysis, collection, transportation and disposal. And, near Swan Hills, the most advanced special waste treatment centre in North America. This comprehensive program is more than a precaution for the health of our environment. It's a moral commitment to future generations.

Travel tips...

By Rilla Higgins

Featured on these pages are just a few examples of the many and varied vacation destinations enjoyed by Canadians during our cooler months each year. Prices quoted are offered during low or off season, effective now until December 15.

The cost of travel often reflects the seasons and main holiday periods of the year.

The price of air flights are determined as follows: HIGH SEASON - mid June to early September, Christmas and Easter holidays/spring breaks - highest fares; LOW SEASON - early September until mid December, early January until mid June - lowest fares. Some destinations such as Britain and Europe continue to have a SHOULDER SEASON during fall and spring. Fares are moderate. As in all things there can be exceptions but this is a good guideline.

Keep in mind this old adage, 'the early bird gets the worm'. The farther ahead you reserve and pay for your flights the better your chance of obtaining seats at the lowest current fare. At least 21 days in advance is required. For flights to the United States 30 days is necessary. The closer you book to your date of departure the higher the fare will be.

Be advised that ALL TRAVEL AGENTS SELL AIRLINE SEATS AT AIRLINE PRICES. Failure to do so will cost the agent his license to sell tickets on behalf of all air carriers.

Package holidays to favorite sun spots are most expensive during Christmas and Easter holidays/spring breaks and from late January until early April.

To avoid high costs, crowded flights, resorts and beaches plan your vacations for the off season months.

The weather is great during spring and fall, very warm with little rainfall. Maximize the value of your travel dollar. Take advantage of less crowded conditions and experience a new destination and culture. If you're a first-time traveller service staff will have more time to answer your questions and offer sight-seeing suggestions, etc.

Visit your local agent for information and brochures. Discuss the type of holiday you have in mind. Ask questions. Express concerns. A good agent will take the time and make every effort to help you plan and book a holiday that will meet both your expectations and your budget.

Additional information will appear in future editions.

The Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Award is presented by Alberta Power Limited and Trans Alta Utilities in co-operation with the Alberta Weekly Newspaper Association, to young Albertans whose consistent efforts "to make life better for others" are recognized.

This year, there were ten award winners selected from four hundred and ten nominations. The Alberta Junior Citizen Awards have been given for the past twenty-six years.

Seventeen year old Laura, unselfishly devotes herself to her mother who suffers from severe arthritis and has had a leg amputated. Laura accepts responsibilities, does chores for the elderly, is an excellent baby-sitter, was President of the Church Class last year, participates in Sunday School, seminary, assists with Church functions and plays the flute in the Raymond High School Band. She encourages those around with her kindness. She is a Grade 12 graduate of June, 1987 from the Raymond High School.

Laura is the daughter of Bill and Nola Coma, who for many years operated the Shell Service Station in Elk Point, Alberta.

Laura was born in the Elk Point Hospital and attended E.C.S. in Elk Point. she has a sister Charlotte, R.N.A. and a brother Darrel, a pharmacist, both were graduates of Elk Point High School. Like Laura, Charlotte and Darrel have always been very kind and helpful to their mother.

At the Raymond High School on September 16, 1987, Laura was presented with the I.T.O. and Henry Iwaasa Memorial Scholarship in Humanities.

Congratulations Laura.

Laura May Coma — Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Award winner, with Violet McFadyen, who nominated her.

On October 3 the Elk Point Public Library will be celebrating thier 2nd Anniversary with cake and refreshments. We would like to extend an invitation to the Elk Point Community to come and join us.

October 3 also marks the first day of their annual book sale with proceeds going towards the purchase of more books for the library.

This book sale is a great way to put a dent in your Christmas list. Special emphasis is put on children's books that are not available locally, as well as adult and youth fiction and non-fiction.

On Information Night, Julie Whiffen Peters won the "members only" book draw. Congratulations, Julie.

Gasaver releases microscopic quantities of platinum into the air fuel mixture increasing the fuel burning from 68% to 90%. Leaded or unleaded gasoline efficiency increased by 22% in the engine not in the catalytic converter (outside the engine). Independent testing shows greater than 22% savings claimed by NFC.
